Black Cube Behind the Videogate

The Israeli intelligence firm is also said to have had a hand in Cyprus

Reading about the involvement of an Israeli private intelligence firm (Black Cube) in Slovenia's national elections set off alarm bells not only for Cyprus but also for other European countries.

The way Black Cube attempted to entrap Slovenia's Social Democratic Party was very reminiscent of the infamous video posted on Twitter in January, which showed close associates of Nikos Christodoulides willing to accept cash contributions cash so that he could circumvent the €1 million limit on his election campaign.

The initial reaction from the presidential camp at the time was that the revelations in the video—the substance of which no one from the government or among those involved disputed—were the product of hybrid warfare by The initial reaction from the presidential camp at the time was that the revelations in the video, the substance of which no one on the part of the government or those involved disputed, were the product of hybrid warfare by Russia.

Ultimately, it appears that the attempt to "harm the Republic of Cyprus and its president" was orchestrated by an "allied" hand. For unqualified support for the Zionist state does not merely imply complicity in genocide, it also means further emboldening Israeli interests that operate internationally and have no qualms about exposing even the most loyal dogs of the Israeli court.

Citing sources close to the investigation by the independent criminal inquiry team led by Andreas Paschalidis, Politis reported on April 10 that the company behind the creation of the video is indeed Black Cube, the "private Mossad," as it is called in the international press.

Politis' report has already been confirmed by Black Cube itself, which focused on exposing acts of corruption by Cyfield, without saying anything about the Christodoulides government. What Black Cube did not mention, however, is the close relationship it allegedly has with the government of the criminal Netanyahu. As early as 2014, Black Cube participated, according to reports at the time, in smear campaigns against then-U.S. President Barack Obama, in order to prevent the Western powers from reaching an agreement with the Islamic Republic of Iran regarding its nuclear program. We note that this company has been involved in various cases in which it has employed unethical practices to advance the interests it represents.

Questions are also being raised, however, regarding Nicos Christodoulides and his government, given the full support the Republic of Cyprus offers to the State of Israel, both during the genocide against the Palestinians and regarding the unprovoked war against Iran and the bombings of Lebanon.

Israel has already announced the annexation of territories in southern Lebanon covering a larger area than that occupied by Russia in Ukraine since the invasion began in February 2022, with the Cypriot Foreign Minister limiting himself to verbal appeals for respect for the territorial integrity of the neighboring country.

We recall that the EU, including the Republic of Cyprus, imposed sanctions against the Russian Federation following the start of the invasion of Ukraine. In contrast, Israel, after two and a half years of genocide and while facing accusations of ethnic cleansing and war crimes, enjoys immunity from the EU.
